Elloughton is a well-established village approximately 10 miles west of Hull, offering a good range of local amenities, with further shopping, leisure and transport facilities available in neighbouring Brough.

The village offers a practical lifestyle with a range of local services designed for convenience. Residents enjoy the community feel of the local pubs, and the area is well-served by a variety of independent shops and facilities, supermarkets, and recreational opportunities.

Education is a significant draw for families, with the village being home to the well-regarded Elloughton Primary School. For secondary education, the village falls within the catchment for the highly regarded South Hunsley School and Sixth Form College in nearby Melton. Furthermore, prestigious independent options, including Hymers College, Tranby, and Pocklington School, are also within easy reach, ensuring excellent educational choices for all age groups.

Elloughton provides superb regional connectivity, making it an ideal base for many. The village sits in a prime position for access to the A63, which connects directly to the M62 motorway network and Hull city centre. For rail travel, the nearby station at Brough provides regular services to Hull, Leeds, and London King's Cross.

Accessibility to key destinations includes:
