Why you'll like it

This three-bedroom stone-built mid-terrace on Bar Lane in Riddlesden combines character features with a practical family layout, including a separate lounge, a dining kitchen, an entrance porch and outdoor space to the front and rear.

The lounge features a decorative fireplace with floral tiled inserts, built-in alcove shelving and cupboards, and ceiling coving. A large front-facing window brings natural light into the room, while the staircase rises to the first floor.

The dining kitchen provides separate cooking and dining areas linked by a broad archway. Fitted wall and base units offer storage alongside contrasting worktops, a stainless-steel sink and tiled splashbacks, with space for a freestanding cooker and appliances. Further cupboards in the dining area provide additional storage, and an external door opens to the rear.

Upstairs are three bedrooms, with the smaller room currently used as a playroom and offering flexibility as a nursery or home office. The principal bedroom includes a decorative fireplace recess. The house bathroom comprises a bath with a glass screen, pedestal wash basin and WC.

To the front, a gravelled garden with established shrubs and ornamental trees sits alongside a paved path leading to the enclosed entrance porch. The rear yard provides paved areas for outdoor seating and play, enclosed by stone walls and timber fencing.

A home with character and flexible accommodation, suited to buyers seeking three bedrooms and manageable outdoor space in Riddlesden
