Tenterden

£350,000

Bedrooms: 2 | Bathrooms: 1 | Receptions: 1

There's something people really love about this part of St Michaels.

It's quiet, neighbourly and tucked away enough to feel peaceful, while still being incredibly convenient for everyday life. You've got countryside walks, a local post office, pubs, shops and even the DIY store nearby — with Tenterden just a few minutes down the road too.

And honestly, homes around here don't come up very often.

This detached bungalow feels like a genuine opportunity for someone wanting space, potential and the chance to create a home that properly suits them.

The living room is a brilliant size and feels lovely and bright, with sliding doors opening straight out into the garden — giving that nice connection between inside and out. Both bedrooms are proper doubles, especially the main bedroom which offers plenty of space without compromise.

The kitchen is another real positive here. Unlike some smaller bungalow kitchens, this one has a much more usable layout with enough room to properly design something special. You've also got views over the garden and direct side access, which is incredibly handy day-to-day.

Outside, the garden has clearly been a bit neglected over time... but the potential is obvious. With some love and imagination, this could easily become one of those gardens you genuinely enjoy spending time in again.

Add in the detached garage, driveway parking and no onward chain, and this starts to feel like a really smart buy for someone looking long-term.

Yes, there's still updating to do with the kitchen and bathroom. But that's part of the appeal.

This is a blank canvas in a seriously good location — and those are getting harder and harder to find.
