The Old Workshop: A Distinctive Home of Character and Light in the Centre of Uppingham

Set behind stone walls and private gates in the heart of Uppingham, The Old Workshop was originally built in 1895 as part of Uppingham School's facilities. Converted to residential use in 1994, it was comprehensively updated in 2004, with oak floors and sympathetic modernisation throughout. The result is a well-balanced property with practical living space, architectural interest and a layout that offers both flexibility and comfort, all within a conservation area.

The front door makes a memorable first impression, set within a pointed stone arch and framed by ironwork. It opens into a generous hallway, from which the house flows naturally into its main reception rooms.

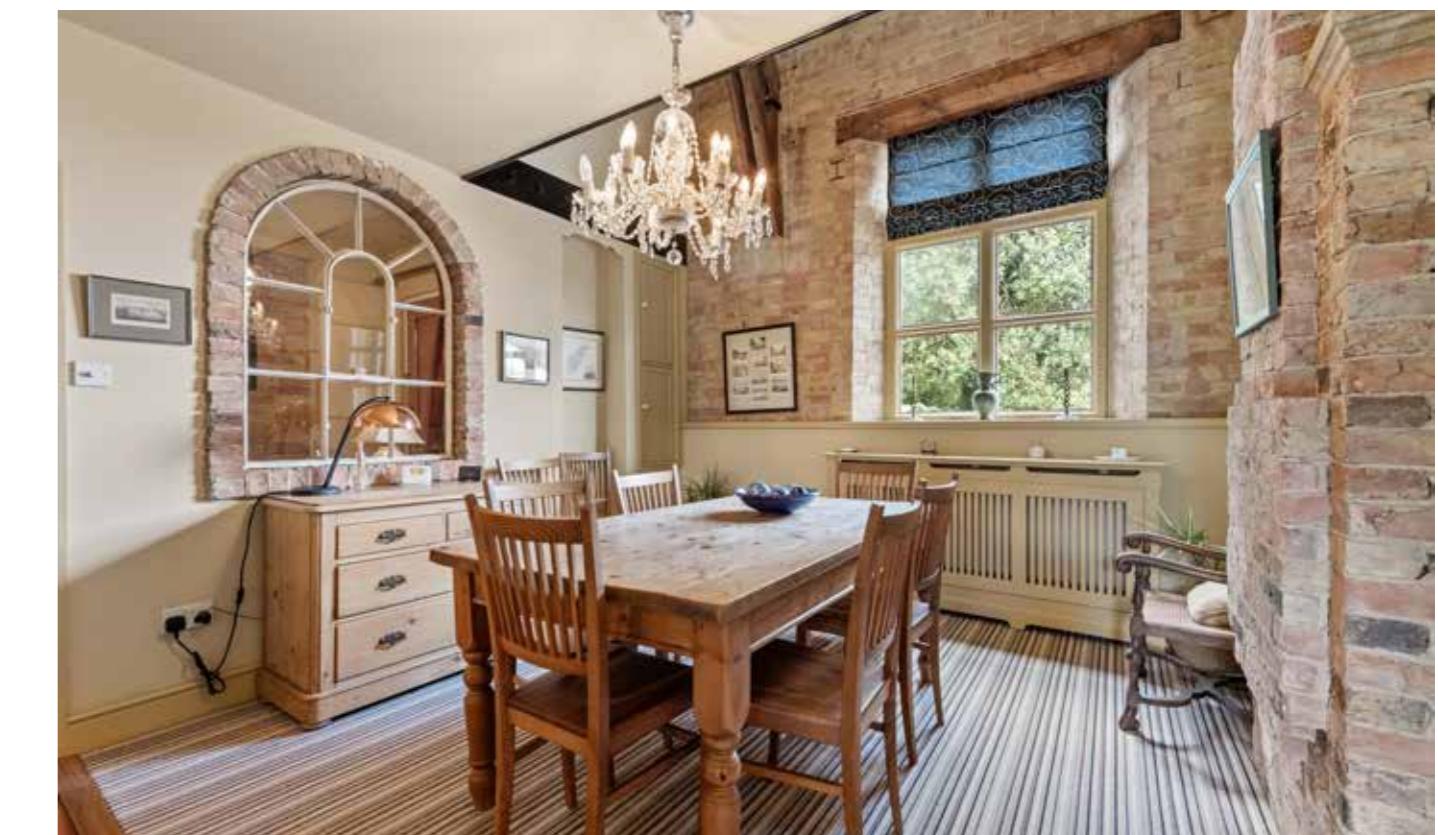

The dining room and adjacent L-shaped sitting room form the heart of the home. Both benefit from double-height ceilings with a gallery above and large windows that bring in an impressive amount of natural light. Exposed beams add warmth and structure, while visible steel struts on the upper level introduce a distinctive industrial detail that works beautifully with the building's original fabric. The snug area of the sitting room offers a relaxed corner for everyday use while remaining part of the open plan layout.

The kitchen is accessed from the hallway and includes an Aga (available by separate negotiation), ample cabinetry, and a practical utility section with laundry facilities and additional storage. A breakfast table fits comfortably for those more relaxed days, and a door leads directly out to the garden, connecting the indoor space to the multi-level courtyard garden.

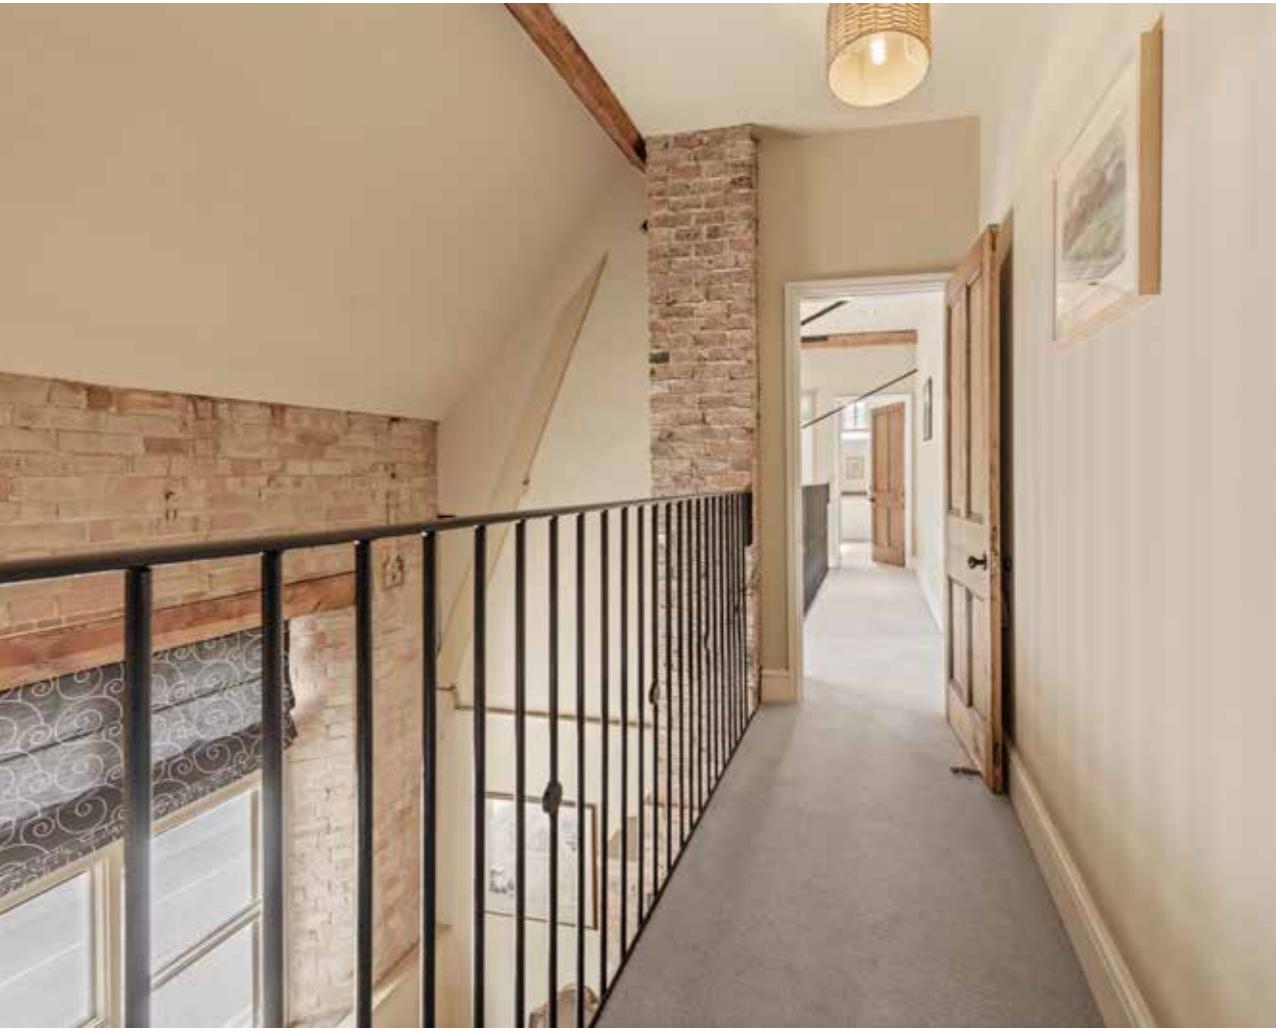

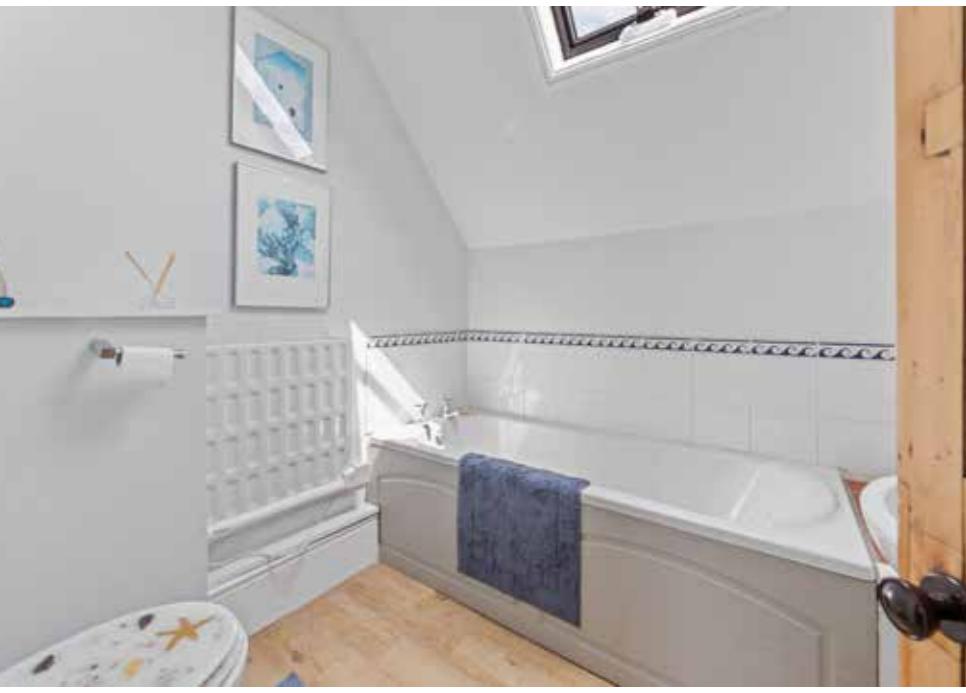

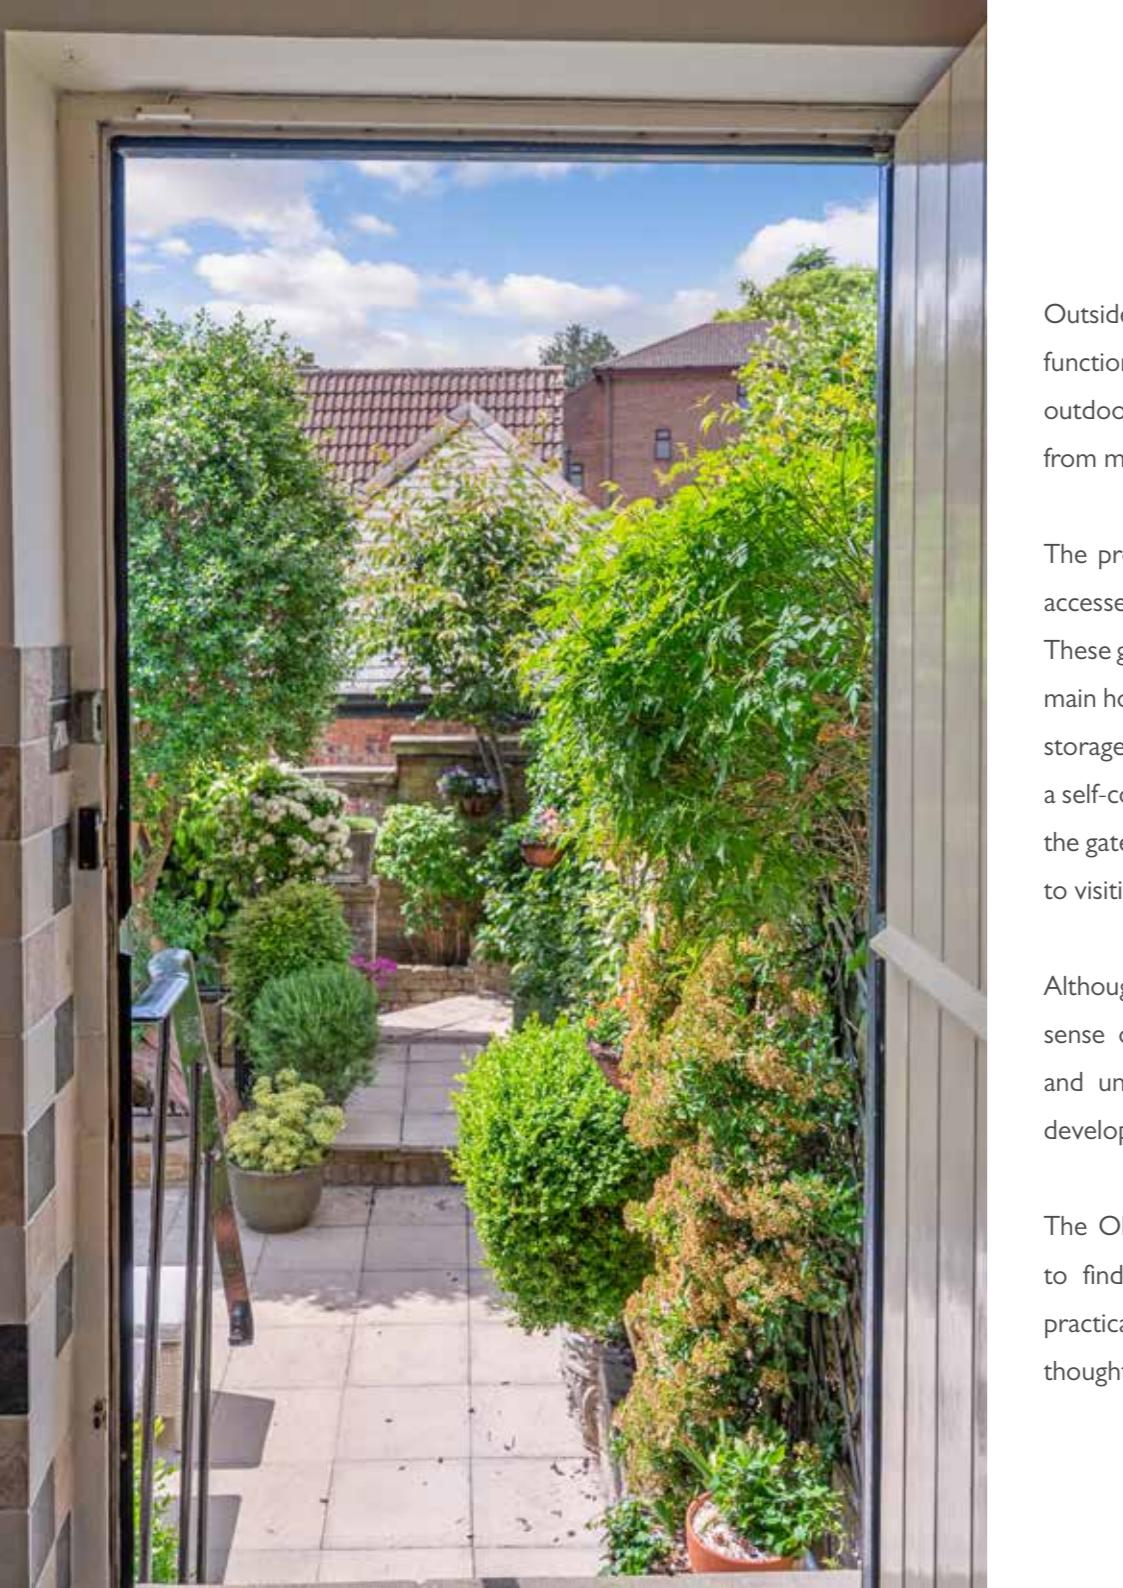

Upstairs, three bedrooms are arranged along the galleried landing. The principal suite includes fitted wardrobes and a spacious en-suite shower room with a generous Grohe monsoon shower. A second double bedroom also offers built-in storage and exposed beams. The third bedroom, currently used as a study, is well sized and versatile, with an internal window that provides a quirky link down to the reception space below. Also on this level is a family bathroom with bath, basin and WC, and an additional separate shower room. A deep linen cupboard completes the upstairs layout.

Throughout the house, materials have been chosen with care. Original brickwork and beams are thoughtfully retained, and structural elements such as metal struts are left visible, adding to the home's unique character without overwhelming it.

Outside, the garden is compact and enclosed, bordered by brick walls, it functions more as a private courtyard than a traditional garden – a calm outdoor extension of the house, with a westerly aspect that brings in light from midday through to evening.

The property also includes a garage and two off-street parking spaces, all accessed via a pair of solid wooden electric double gates from the road. These gates also serve as a secondary access point to the garden. Beneath the main house, there is a large garage and an adjoining room, in addition there is storage, all of which could be converted, subject to the usual consents, into a self-contained annexe with a kitchen and bathroom. With access both from the gated parking area and directly from the street, this space lends itself well to visiting family, live-in support or a separate workspace.

Although the house sits close to the centre of town, it retains a distinct sense of privacy. The churchyard sits across the road, offering a green and uninterrupted outlook, quiet neighbours, and the guarantee of no development.

The Old Workshop is a property that offers something increasingly hard to find, character and architectural interest, combined with day-to-day practicality. Well located and quietly distinctive, it's a home that's been thoughtfully designed to suit modern living without losing sight of its heritage.

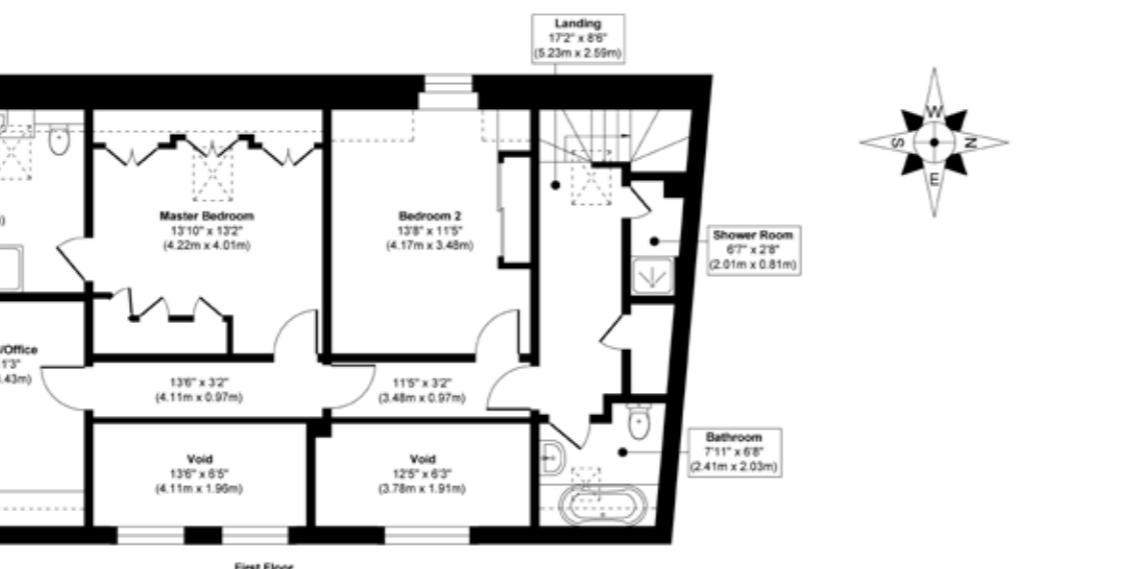

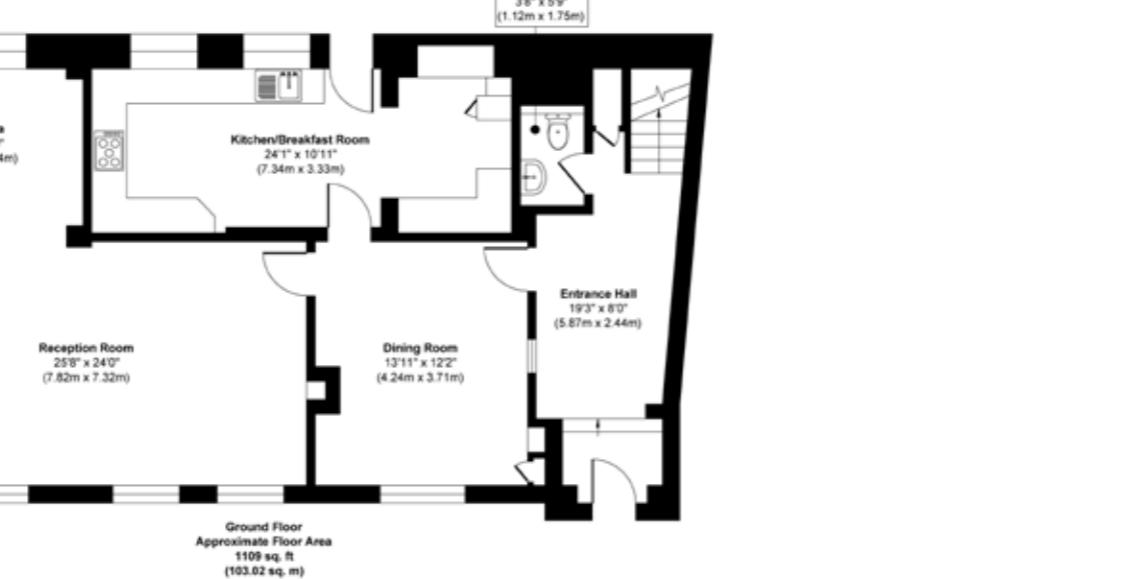

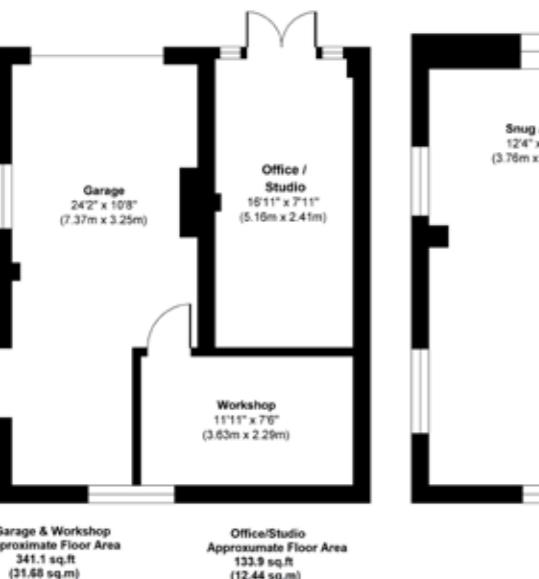

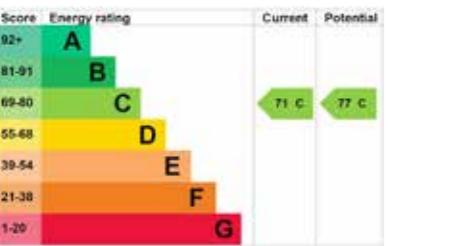

Uppingham is Rutland's most desirable town, known for its historic character, excellent schools and independent high street. The town has a strong cultural presence thanks to Uppingham School, which supports a range of music, sport and art events throughout the year. There's a weekly market, a vibrant café scene, and an impressively strong mix of local shops and services, all within a short walk from the house.

The area itself is very well connected. The respected state and independent schools are nearby, and mainline rail services into London are available from Corby or Kettering, with journey times from around an hour to St Pancras. Road links to Leicester, Oakham and Stamford make Uppingham a convenient base for both work and travel.
