Rare to the market, this lovely three bedroom mid-terraced cottage, located within the tranquil village of Ingleton. This charming cottage is perfect for a family with a local primary school close by, and a pub within easy reach.

Former Methodist Chapel (1859)

Chapel Cottage is a distinctive and deceptively spacious village home located on Front Street in the centre of Ingleton. The original building dates from 1859 when it served as the village Methodist chapel, giving the property an interesting local heritage and character rarely found in typical village homes.

The original chapel plaque dated 1859 remains preserved on the building, maintaining a visible link to the property's past.

The property retains several interesting historic details reflecting its origins as the village chapel, including the original alcove within the front reception room, the chapel plaque dated 1859, and two original concealed glass 'witch bottles', traditionally believed to ward off evil spirits, one on each side of the roofline. These traditional Victorian features were believed to ward off evil spirits and provide a charming reminder of the building's 19th-century origins.

The property briefly comprises of; front reception room, kitchen, inner hallway with stairs to the first floor, whilst at the rear you will find a spacious living room with patio doors to the rear garden.

The first floor provides a landing with three double bedrooms, and a generous sized family bathroom.

Externally, the property has lovely gardens to the front, whilst you will find a terraced garden at the the rear.
