➤ IF YOU LIVED HERE...

This landmark Grade II-listed Victorian building has a rich past. Completed in 1896 in an ornate Italianate style, it served as a civic institution for more than a century before being converted into 32 individual apartments in 2011.

Even from the outside, the building makes an impression, with its bold brick façade and confident proportions. Inside, that sense of stature continues. Original details have been carefully preserved from the polished wooden handrails, finely worked iron spindles and a sweeping staircase, all reflect the building's craft and history.

A secure entry system adds peace of mind, before you enter into your own private hallway where steps take you past clever built-in storage (shelving recessed into the wall and a cupboard under the staircase) with a glass-panelled balustrade allowing light to flow and providing a contemporary twist, before opening out into your main studio room.

Warm wooden flooring runs underfoot, paired with crisp white walls for a clean, cohesive feel throughout.

In the main living space, three large sash windows pour in natural light. Its double aspect and southwesterly orientation is a real bonus, ensuring you get the best of the sunlight all day. The kitchen sits neatly to the rear, fitted with shaker-style units, rustic tiling, timber worktops and streamlined, integrated appliances. With high ceilings adding an extra lift, the entire space feels bright, calm and easy to live in. There's even another large walk-in storage space off this main room - perfect as a pantry or even a discreet office set-up

You'll find the bathroom set on the next level, finished with polished concrete-style tiling, bringing a subtle industrial note that sets off the sleek white suite beautifully.

And for a spot so well connected, there's plenty of greenery close by. Coronation Gardens, Hackney Marshes and the Olympic Park are all within walking distance, offering space to slow down when you need it.
