Such areas are designated by UK Health Security Agency which also advises Government on the numerical value of the 'Radon Action Level' (the recommended maximum radon concentration for present homes expressed as an annual average concentration in the home. Radon concentrations above the Action Level should be reduced below it and become as low as reasonably practicable).
For NEW HOMES in England built in affected areas shown on the maps in the 1999 edition of BR211, the builder or building control body should know what type of radon protection has been provided. If the reply is positive (but not if the reply is negative) the following statement (informative) applies: Radon Affected Areas are designated by the UK Health Security Agency. It is recommended that the level of radon gas should be measured in all properties within Radon Affected Areas. The present owner or (for a new property) the builder should be asked whether protective measures were incorporated in the construction of the property; whether radon levels have been measured in the property, whether results were at or above the Action Level and if so whether remedial measures were installed and whether the radon levels were re-tested and confirmed the effectiveness of the measures. #### Move Reports Commitment

If a Remediation Notice is served by the local authority the homeowner may be required to pay for all, or part of the remediation to the property. The buyer of this report may be eligible for all, or a portion of the Move Reports commitment fund of £100,000. For more information see Move Reports Terms and Conditions.

FOOTNOTE:

Access to certain information may not be either freely available or genuinely unavailable when conducting the Personal Search: the circumstances in which information is genuinely unavailable are extremely limited but if this is the case then it would be the only time when the search compiler can itself take the decision not to answer a question. This refers to a very small number of cases where a record does not exist under any circumstances and the information it contains is not available even to the data provider itself. For example, where planning data which theoretically is available back to 1940s but is archived in deep storage and is not available to the local authority itself. The key test here will be whether the information could be obtained by means of a report from the data provider themselves. If it can, then it cannot be classified as genuinely unavailable data and it must be provided regardless of cost or delay unless the client expressly requests its omission from the final report. The result of this is the introduction by MoveReportsUK Ltd of individual indemnity insurance (at no additional cost) covering these specific questions. Copy of the Insurance cover is attached to the rear of the search. This is also outlined and supported within our Terms of Business paragraph 3.3 & 8.4 respectively.

Information Sources:

The information obtained can be via a number of channels being; Local Authority web-sites, Private sector web-sites, Government and other public bodies web sites, manual records and archive, visiting local authority or county council departments to inspect the following records; Local Land Charges, Planning, Building regulations, Environmental, Housing, Listed Buildings, Conservation Area, Current & Proposed development Plans, Highways register, Enforcement, stop & Breach of Condition Notices, Contaminated Land & Hazardous Substance Consents and Radon Atlas. And written requests such as the LLC1 form, replies direct from the vendor, information under the freedom of information act and under any council 'commercial-licence' agreements with local authorities. As subscribers to the Search Code Move Reports will be required to demonstrate the actual information source per specific property report during audit inspections. Land Charge information purchased will be included 'without analysis or comment' to the rear of the report for HMRC VAT purposes with interpretation to be carried out by the conveyancing professional.

MoveReportsUK Ltd follow a strict procedure to enable full track and traceability from the generation, compilation and final draft of the Local Search.
