Nestled on a tree-lined street in the heart of Telegraph Hill, close to the open green spaces of Telegraph Hill Parks, this substantial five bedroom semi-detached Victorian home combines period charm with generous proportions and modern living.

Extending to approximately 3,065 sq ft (approx. 285 sq m), the property offers three reception rooms, five bedrooms and three bathrooms, including a thoughtfully reconfigured upper level with a bright open space, sloping ceiling and skylights.

Original features such as fireplaces and decorative wood panelling enhance the character, while the basement provides a self-contained studio with its own kitchenette and shower room, ideal for guest accommodation or flexible use. The property also benefits from a private garden with mature trees, and the upper floors enjoy open and distant views across London.

The lower ground floor studio benefits from independent access from both the street and the garden, in addition to internal access from the main house, and could potentially be further adapted for more independent use, subject to the usual requirements and consents.
