Enjoying an elevated position this handsome and elegant residence must be viewed internally to fully appreciate the truly outstanding bright and surprisingly spacious accommodation that "Badgers" has to offer. Built in 1937 the property has been the subject of huge improvements over the years and has still managed to retain many fine features of the period, with thoughtfully planned additions spanning over three levels to provide great versatility in the arrangement of the accommodation, reflecting modern day living.

The location is ideal with the stunning Lea Valley Nature Reserve literally on the doorstep, just a short stroll away is the busy high street shopping parade in the heart of the village, which caters for daily requirements. Highly regarded schools and good transport links by both road and rail are easily accessible. Nazeing can boast it has its own golf course.

Note of interest: Formerly the home of inventor Ronald Hickman, designer of the Lotus Elan car together with the Black and Decker Workmate.

For those purchasers seeking an outstanding family home, in a sought-after location, occupying generous sized and secluded wrap around gardens an early viewing is recommended

EXTERIOR

Large sweeping well stocked brick retaining borders are found either side of brick-built piers with carriage lighting forming an impressive entrance and providing a good first impression on arrival to the property. The driveway is designed with maximum parking potential in mind, laid with permeable block paving created in a circular design pattern framed by well stocked flowering and mature shrub borders. There is access to the rear garden either side of the property, a brick-built archway and gate to one side lead to a wide paved terrace.

DOUBLE GARAGE 17'6 x 16'1 With up and over door with light, power, radiator and water connections. To one side of the garage is a sink unit with mixer tap and working surface. Wood shelving to one side provides excellent storage solutions.

ROOF TERRACE 19'1 x 11' Decked with wooden railings and steps leading to the main garden below.

The rear garden is a true delight and a fine feature of the property, thoughtfully landscaped and well secluded, laid mainly to lawn with wide borders well stocked with an abundance of mature trees, flowering shrubs, evergreens, perennials and productive fruit trees, all supplying colour and scents throughout the seasons. In addition to the large paved sun terrace directly behind the property there are shingled areas creating secret gardens, there are several sun terraces dispersed throughout the garden each offering a sunny aspect from where to sit and enjoy this stunning and secluded garden.
