Romford is a busy suburban town in East London within the London Borough of Havering, around 12 miles from central London. It's popular with commuters thanks to strong transport links, including the Elizabeth line and fast trains to Liverpool Street, as well as easy road access via the A12 and M25. The area offers relatively affordable housing for London, attracting first-time buyers, families and professionals. Romford has a lively town centre with shopping centres, restaurants, nightlife and the historic Romford Market, while nearby parks and green spaces add balance to urban life.
