Fuchsia Cottage, School Lane, Middleton Stoney, Oxfordshire

From the moment you arrive, the timeless appeal of mellow Cotswold stone elevations, climbing roses and the handcrafted oak porch create an unforgettable first impression. Every detail reflects the warmth and authenticity that only a true period cottage can offer.

Stepping inside, the welcoming entrance leads directly into a beautifully proportioned sitting room where exposed beams, wide timber flooring and an impressive inglenook fireplace create an atmosphere of comfort and history. The room is flooded with natural light through traditional cottage windows whilst retaining an intimate and cosy feel, making it equally suited to quiet evenings beside the fire or entertaining family and friends.

The adjoining kitchen/dining room has been thoughtfully designed to complement the home's heritage, featuring painted cabinetry, solid timber worktops and decorative tiled splashbacks. Offering an excellent balance between practicality and character, it provides an inviting space for everyday living whilst enjoying views towards the delightful rear garden.

The first floor continues the cottage's charm with two beautifully presented bedrooms. The principal bedroom is a generous double, showcasing exposed timbers and wonderful proportions, whilst the second bedroom offers versatility as a guest bedroom, nursery or home office. A stylish family bathroom features a freestanding roll-top bath with rainfall shower, combining classic elegance with contemporary convenience.

Outside, Fuchsia Cottage truly comes into its own. The landscaped rear garden is a private oasis, beautifully established with mature planting, colourful borders, specimen trees and secluded seating areas that create an ever-changing display throughout the seasons. Stone terraces provide the perfect setting for outdoor dining and entertaining, while the lush lawn and cottage planting evoke the quintessential English country garden.

A particular feature of the property is the private driveway running alongside the cottage, which is owned by the property and provides access to three original brick-built piggeries. Rich in character and retaining their historic charm, these outbuildings offer enormous potential. Subject to the necessary planning permissions and listed building consents where applicable, they could be transformed into exceptional home offices, creative studios, presenting a rare opportunity to further enhance an already remarkable home.

Situation

Middleton Stoney is admired for its attractive period architecture and welcoming community. School Lane is particularly desirable, being a quiet no-through road with minimal passing traffic, whilst remaining remarkably well connected.

The village enjoys excellent access to the A34, A41 and M40, placing Oxford, Bicester, Banbury, Buckingham and Milton Keynes all within comfortable driving distance. London and Birmingham are also easily reached via the motorway network, making the property ideal for commuters.

Rail services are equally impressive, with Bicester Village Station offering regular services to London Marylebone in around 50 minutes, whilst Bicester North Station provides further direct connections to London, Birmingham and the wider national rail network. Oxford Parkway also offers additional fast commuter services into the capital.

Families are particularly well served by an excellent selection of schools. State education includes highly regarded primary schools within the local area together with secondary schooling in nearby Bicester. The property is also ideally positioned for many of Oxfordshire's renowned independent schools including Bloxham School, St Edward's Oxford, The Dragon School, Oxford High School, Magdalen College School, Tudor Hall, Beachborough School and Winchester House, all within convenient travelling distance.

A Rare Opportunity

Fuchsia Cottage is a home where every room tells a story. From the warmth of the exposed beams and magnificent inglenook fireplace to the well maintained thatched roof, enchanting gardens and the exciting potential offered by the original piggeries, this is a property that captures the very essence of English country living.
