About The Property

Looking for a substantial character property in a distinctive country setting close to Cardigan? Located high above the River Teifi with spectacular views of Cilgerran Castle, forming part of Grade II listed Coedmor Mansion, this four-bedroom freehold home offers approximately 172.5 sq m of accommodation, a private balcony, a garage and a possibility to purchase another, and extensive communal grounds, with updating required.

Set within the impressive surroundings of Grade II listed Coedmor Mansion at Llangoedmor, this substantial four-bedroom home forms part of an historic country property that has been divided into individual homes. Offering approximately 172.5 sq m of accommodation, together with a private balcony, a garage and access to extensive communal grounds, this is an interesting property with plenty of character and a setting that feels quite different from a conventional residential development.

Coedmor Mansion is approached along a shared driveway, which leads through the established grounds to the handsome stone-built property and its courtyard setting. Traditional stone elevations, arched openings, gables and period detailing give the building a distinctive appearance, while mature trees and broad areas of communal garden surround the mansion.

The accommodation within River House is arranged over two floors and provides a generous and flexible layout. Character can be found throughout, including exposed beams, high and vaulted ceilings in several rooms, timber doors and broad multi-pane windows looking across the mature surroundings.

From the main entrance, the hallway connects the principal ground-floor rooms and provides access to the staircase leading to the first floor.

The kitchen is positioned towards the front of the property, with a separate dining room alongside. Keeping these as individual rooms provides clearly defined cooking and dining spaces while retaining a practical connection between the two.

Details Continued:
The living room is one of the main features of the accommodation, with good proportions providing plenty of room for seating and additional furniture. Exposed beams and the height of the ceiling add character, while doors open directly onto the property's private balcony.

This balcony provides River House with its own outdoor sitting space separate from the communal grounds and looks across the established surroundings, creating a particularly appealing extension to the main living accommodation.

Alongside the living room is a separate office, providing a useful dedicated space for working from home, hobbies or simply as an additional sitting room. The flexibility of having several separate reception spaces is a real advantage for a property of this size.

A ground-floor shower room is also accessed from the inner hallway, adding useful facilities alongside the main family bathroom upstairs.

The staircase rises to a long first-floor landing, where exposed beams and changing ceiling heights continue the character seen downstairs.

Bedroom one is a good-sized double room with a generous amount of fitted wardrobe storage. A broad window looks towards the mature trees surrounding the property, while the vaulted ceiling and exposed beam give the room plenty of individuality.

Bedroom two provides another double bedroom, again with built-in storage and a pleasant outlook across the surroundings.

There is a further third bedroom, while the fourth room is shown on the floor plan as Bedroom 4/Study. This gives the first floor useful flexibility, allowing the property to function as a four-bedroom home or as three bedrooms with a dedicated study or hobby room.

The family bathroom is another characterful room, with extensive timber boarding across the sloping ceiling. It currently incorporates a bath, separate shower area, WC, bidet and wash basin, together with a window looking towards the wooded surroundings.

The property would benefit from updating and improvement in places, leaving scope for a new owner to make changes to suit their own requirements while working with the character of this Grade II listed building.

Importantly, there are also some substantial areas of cracking visible within the property. Prospective purchasers are advised to seek appropriate specialist advice and satisfy themselves as to the condition of the property before proceeding with a purchase.

Externally:
The surroundings are an important part of life at Coedmor Mansion. River House has use of the communal grounds, which include broad areas of grass, established planting and numerous mature trees, creating an attractive backdrop to the historic building.

The driveway and 5.5 acre grounds are shared between the owners of the individual properties within Coedmor Mansion, rather than belonging exclusively to River House.

The property's private balcony therefore provides a particularly useful addition, giving River House its own defined outdoor sitting space alongside access to the wider communal grounds. There is also a lower terrace beneath the balcony belonging privately to the property.

Another significant practical advantage is that there is a garage included with the property and an option to buy an additional garage via separate negotiation. These are situated within the garage block and provide useful parking and storage space.

A maintenance charge of approximately £600 per annum is currently payable to the Coedmor management company towards the shared arrangements at the development.

INFORMATION ABOUT THE AREA:
River House is situated at Llangoedmor, just outside the market town of Cardigan. The location provides a countryside setting while keeping the shops and everyday services of Cardigan within convenient reach.

Cardigan offers a good selection of amenities, including independent shops, supermarkets, cafés and restaurants, together with schools, leisure facilities and other everyday services. The River Teifi and surrounding countryside are also an important part of the local landscape.

From here, the coastline and villages around Cardigan Bay are accessible by car, including a choice of beaches and stretches of the West Wales coast. The wider area offers plenty for those interested in walking, countryside and coastal activities while still having a busy market town nearby.
