Grizedale Court, Seaburn Dene, Sunderland, SR6

Asking Price £265,000

Located on Grizedale Court in the well-regarded residential area of Seaburn Dene, Sunderland, this mid-terrace property offers a compelling combination of space, practicality, and a sought-after address. Dating from the 1950s, the house is solidly built and extends to just under 1,000 square feet — a generous footprint for a mid-terrace, and one that translates into genuinely comfortable living space throughout.

The reception room forms the heart of the home and is a good size by any measure. Well-proportioned and versatile, it lends itself equally to relaxed family living and more formal entertaining, with enough space to accommodate both without feeling like a compromise either way.

The four bedrooms provide a level of flexibility that relatively few properties in this price bracket can offer. Whether the priority is room for a growing family, space for remote working, or simply the luxury of a dedicated guest room, the layout delivers without feeling stretched. The bathroom is sensibly appointed and well-suited to the demands of a busy household, featuring a separate WC for added convenience.

Practical considerations are well covered too. Off-street parking for a vehicle is a notable asset in this part of Sunderland, where on-street parking can be a daily frustration for residents without it.

Beyond the property itself, Seaburn Dene continues to be one of the more desirable residential addresses on the north side of the city. The area benefits from a strong sense of community, good local amenities, and convenient access to schools and transport links — factors that consistently underpin demand here and make it a sound choice for families and professionals alike.

This is a well-rounded family home in a location that speaks for itself. Early viewing is strongly recommended.
