About The Property

Looking for a characterful four-bedroom home with generous living space, gardens, parking and a garage, within easy reach of Cardigan town and the Cardigan Bay coast? This distinctive period property combines three reception rooms and well-proportioned bedrooms with original-style features, outside space and a convenient position on the road towards Gwbert.

Set along Gwbert Road on the edge of Cardigan town centre, this substantial four-bedroom period home has a great deal of character, generous proportions and an architectural style that immediately sets it apart. With approximately 161.1 sq m of accommodation, three reception rooms, four bedrooms, driveway parking, a garage and gardens, there is plenty of space here for family life, while the location combines easy access to Cardigan with a direct route towards the coast at Gwbert.

The exterior gives a good indication of what is to come. A distinctive turreted bay rises through both floors beneath a tiled roof, complemented by further bay windows, deep eaves and an attractive covered veranda. Double gates open onto a long driveway running alongside the house, providing off-road parking for approximately two to three vehicles and continuing towards the garage at the rear. The established front garden adds a welcome area of green space, with lawn, mature trees and planting softening the frontage.

The main entrance opens through a porch into a hallway that retains plenty of the property's original feel. Timber doors, decorative glazing and the staircase are among the features that give the interior its personality, and this character continues through much of the ground floor.

Details Continued:

The lounge is one of the standout rooms. Its generous proportions are enhanced by the multi-sided bay, while stripped timber floorboards, high ceilings, decorative cornicing and an ornate ceiling rose add to the sense of character. A substantial timber fireplace with tiled inset forms a strong focal point. With the bay creating an additional seating area at one end, this is a room that offers plenty of flexibility without losing the proportions and detailing that make it special.

Across the hallway is a separate sitting room, giving the house a second reception space. This could work equally well as an everyday family room, TV room, home office or more informal sitting space, depending on requirements.

The dining room sits beyond the hallway and provides a dedicated space for a dining table, with another fireplace adding character. From here the accommodation continues naturally into the kitchen.

The kitchen is a long, practical room with a good amount of fitted storage and worktop space. There are fitted appliances and room for the everyday necessities of a busy household, while windows and a glazed external door bring natural light into the room and provide access outside. Some parts of the house would lend themselves to further updating or finishing over time, offering scope for a new owner to put an individual stamp on the property while retaining the period details that already give it so much appeal.

Upstairs, the landing connects four bedrooms and the family bathroom. The principal bedroom is particularly impressive, extending into the turreted bay and benefiting from windows on several sides. Stripped floorboards, decorative detailing and the proportions of the room continue the period character found downstairs, with a feature fireplace providing another attractive focal point.

Bedroom two is another well-proportioned room, while bedroom three provides further double-bedroom space and includes a fireplace and built-in storage. The fourth bedroom is smaller and would work well as a single bedroom, nursery or dedicated study. Having four separate bedrooms gives the house useful flexibility for a family, particularly where working from home is part of day-to-day life.

The family bathroom is positioned towards the rear of the first floor and is fitted with a bath, WC and wash basin. There is also a separate shower with the shower still connected but the shower screen has been removed.

Externally:

Outside, the property offers more than might initially be expected from its position close to town. Alongside the lawned front garden and driveway is a substantial paved area to the rear, creating useful space for outdoor seating, pots and everyday practical use. Beyond this is a further enclosed garden with lawn, established hedging and planting, together with a paved seating area.

A detached garage provides valuable storage or workshop space in addition to its traditional use, while a separate laundry room keeps another practical function away from the main accommodation. The driveway itself offers comfortable parking for around two to three cars, and there is also on-street parking available in the surrounding area.

Henllys is therefore a home with several different strengths: architectural character, four-bedroom accommodation, multiple reception spaces, gardens, parking and a garage, all in a location that keeps Cardigan close at hand while providing straightforward access towards Gwbert and the coast. Some updating offers the chance to make further changes to suit individual tastes, but there is already plenty here worth retaining, particularly the timber floors, fireplaces, decorative plasterwork, bay windows and generous room proportions.

Viewing is recommended to appreciate both the scale of the accommodation and the period detailing found throughout.

INFORMATION ABOUT THE AREA:

One of the property's major practical advantages is its position. Gwbert Road places the house within easy reach of Cardigan's everyday facilities, with schools and supermarkets particularly close by. Cardigan itself has a strong mix of independent shops, cafés and restaurants, as well as the Guildhall Market, Cardigan Castle, arts venues and other services.

At the same time, Gwbert Road heads directly out towards the Cardigan Bay coast. Gwbert is around three miles from Cardigan and provides access to the Wales Coast Path and the coastline around the Teifi estuary. The wider area also puts places such as Mwnt, Patch and Poppit Sands within reach, making this a particularly useful base for combining town amenities with the coast and countryside of West Wales.
