A rare detached home set within its own private oasis on the prestigious Croham Heights Estate, Sanderstead

Set within one of Sanderstead's most coveted residential enclaves, this distinguished detached 1930s home enjoys a uniquely privileged position on the prized Croham Heights Estate, long admired for its build quality, architectural harmony and the enduring appeal of homes that families remain in for generations. With highway on two of its four sides, the property feels wonderfully open and tucked away at the same time, offering a sense of privacy that is rare for the area. The house sits within a wide, mature wraparound garden, viewed beautifully from the conservatory, dining room and study, giving the entire ground floor a calm, leafy outlook. The garden itself, with its mixture of established trees and shrubs, creates a tranquil setting that feels almost cottage like, with the home set back from the front garden in its own peaceful oasis.

A standout feature of the property is the substantial original double width 1930s garage/workshop, accounting for around a fifth of the home's total floor area. With plumbing already in situ, it offers exceptional scope, subject to the usual consents, to create additional living accommodation such as a studio, home office, gym or extended kitchen/family space, while still retaining the off-street parking for three cars. This flexibility is a rare asset on Croham Heights and adds meaningful long-term value.

Inside, the home has been thoughtfully updated with a brand new kitchen and newly fitted bathroom, both finished in a fresh, light palette. The kitchen offers generous preparation space and a bright, practical layout ideal for family life, while the bathroom features elegant styling with wide basin and storage beneath, adding a touch of boutique comfort.

The ground floor includes a study, used as a guest room for many years and while it is not marketed as a bedroom due to its current access via the dining room, the configuration could be altered by re-routing access through the covered passageway between the house and the double garage; a change that would allow it to function as a conventional bedroom if desired.

Upstairs, the property offers three genuine double bedrooms, ensuring that siblings enjoy equal space and that the home works effortlessly for family living. Each room benefits from excellent natural light and the calm, green outlook that defines this part of Sanderstead.

With its generous plot, flexible layout, modern upgrades and exceptional potential, this is a rare opportunity to secure a detached home on one of Sanderstead's most desirable estates; a property that feels private, characterful and ready to be cherished for many years to come.

Location

A Peaceful, Well Connected Village Setting with Exceptional Green Space

This part of Sanderstead offers a rare balance of village calm, excellent transport links and outstanding access to open countryside, making it one of South Croydon's most consistently desirable places to live. From Norfolk Avenue, everyday amenities, commuting options and weekend leisure are all close at hand, giving the location a wonderfully convenient and easy-living feel.

A short bus ride brings you directly into Croydon town centre, home to the landscaped Queen's Gardens, opened by Queen Elizabeth II in 1983, and the renowned Fairfield Halls theatre and arts venue. The route also passes South Croydon station, providing fast, reliable rail connections into London and making commuting straightforward for City and West End professionals in under 25 minutes.

Transport links are a key strength. Sanderstead station is a short drive away, with ample nearby parking and journey times into London Bridge or London Victoria of 25 minutes or less, making the area ideal for those seeking village living without compromising on access to central London.

For weekend enjoyment, a ten minute walk leads to Selsdon Village, which offers an excellent range of shops, cafés and everyday conveniences, including a friendly Wetherspoons pub and a Costa Coffee shop ideal for picking up a drink before exploring the area's 'crown jewel': the National Trust owned Selsdon Wood Nature Reserve, Spanning around 200 acres of treasured woodland, with its own visitor car park, it is a haven for walkers and dog walkers alike. The Wetherspoons pub is even named after the reserve's former curator, Sir Julian Huxley, reflecting the area's rich natural heritage.

Families are exceptionally well served by local schooling. The area offers a strong selection, from Croydon High School (GDST), around a fifteen minute walk and the same to Selsdon Primary School, established at roughly the same time as the Croham Heights Estate. A wider choice of respected state and independent schools is available across Sanderstead, Selsdon and South Croydon, reinforcing the area's long-standing appeal to families.

With its blend of village charm, excellent amenities, fast transport links and outstanding natural spaces, this location offers a lifestyle that feels both peaceful and connected; the perfect complement to the privacy, character and potential of the home itself.
