We have tried to make sure that these particulars are accurate but, to a large extent, we have to rely on what the seller tells us about the property. Once you find the property you want to buy, you will need to carry out more investigations into the property than it is practical or reasonable for an estate agent to do when preparing sales particulars. For example, we have not carried out any kind of survey of the property to look for structural defects and would advise any homebuyer to obtain a surveyor's report before exchanging contracts. If you do not have your own surveyor, we would be pleased to recommend one. We have not checked whether any equipment in the property (such as central heating) is in working order and would advise homebuyers to check this. You should also instruct a solicitor to investigate all legal matters relating to the property (e.g. title, planning permission, etc) as these are specialist matters in which estate agents are not qualified. Your solicitor will also agree with the seller what items (e.g. carpets, curtains, etc) will be included in the sale.

AUCTION GUIDE £250,000

Situated within the iconic Art Deco Pearl Court, this charming three bedroom apartment offers a rare opportunity to own a piece of Eastbourne's architectural heritage. Originally built in the 1930s to accommodate employees of Pearl Assurance, the building has retained its period charm while benefiting from ongoing, thoughtful management. Located on the hall floor, the apartment provides a spacious and well balanced layout, featuring three bedrooms, including a principal bedroom with a shower cubicle and two reception rooms that create inviting living and dining areas. A fitted kitchen, separate WC and private balcony complete the internal accommodation. Additional benefits include a separate storage area in the basement, and a share of the freehold within a well maintained and efficiently run building whilst also being sold chain free. Positioned conveniently between Eastbourne seafront and the mainline train station, the property is within close proximity to local theatres, shops, restaurants and other amenities, ideal for both full time residence or a stylish coastal retreat.
