A Grade II listed period conversion is in the heart of Greenwich, moments from Greenwich Park. The Spread Eagle Inn was originally rebuilt in 1780 for the accommodation of 60 horses, a malt kiln, and smartened up with a stone archway that led through to the yard, now with a new lease of life having been fully refurbished to create three, two bedroom apartments.

This two bedroom apartment has a very high specification throughout, having been tastefully refurbished, including wooden sash windows, oak flooring, German appliances, and quartz worktops; you will also find modern mod-cons, including air conditioning. To the rear, you will find a communal area with a flagstone patio.

Nevada Street is superbly positioned in the very heart of West Greenwich, just moments from the gates of the Royal Park. Arguably one of the most desirable locations in Greenwich Village, the property is within easy walking distance of Royal Hill, Greenwich Picturehouse, Greenwich Theatre, Greenwich Market, and an array of boutique shops, cafés, bars, and restaurants.
