The Property

Set discreetly within the heart of Attleborough, this exceptional detached period cottage enjoys a wonderfully secluded and private setting. Lovingly restored and beautifully maintained by the same family for over 50 years, the property offers an abundance of character, charm, and historic appeal throughout. Exposed beams, original brickwork, and feature fireplaces combine effortlessly to create a home of remarkable warmth and distinction. The welcoming kitchen immediately evokes a sense of home, while the impressive sitting room, once serving as the original Quaker meeting room, forms the true centrepiece of the property. Rich in history and atmosphere, this elegant space is enhanced by striking exposed timbers and an impressive fireplace. The second staircase serves two further characterful bedrooms.
