About The Property

Looking for a character-filled farmhouse with beautiful cottage gardens, useful outbuildings and a separate former cottage with conversion potential? This charming rural property near Abercych combines a five-bedroom period home full of original features with around 1.43 acres in total, including woodland, orchard, workshops and a detached former cottage ripe for redevelopment subject to planning.

Tucked away along a small country lane in the West Wales countryside, this detached farmhouse has the sort of atmosphere that is becoming harder to find. Full of original details, colourful personality and gardens that have clearly been lovingly created over many years, the property feels wonderfully untouched in all the right ways. Together with the separate former cottage, useful outbuildings and productive gardens, this is a home with huge flexibility and plenty of future potential.

The farmhouse itself sits within around 1.2 acres and is approached via its own gated driveway leading to ample off-road parking beside the Dutch barn and workshops. To the front, the house faces the lane with a small enclosed courtyard garden and pathway leading to the entrance porch. Double doors open into the porch with slate flooring and then through into the welcoming hallway, where Victorian chequered tiled flooring immediately sets the tone for the rest of the house.

The sitting room to the front is packed with charm, featuring exposed beams, original built-in cupboards and a fireplace with a bespoke handmade wooden surround. The Victorian tiled floor continues through here and a door links directly into the kitchen.

Across the hallway, the lounge and dining room provide a lovely flowing reception space with exposed beams overhead and fireplace adding warmth and character. The lounge area has suspended wooden flooring and a fireplace with tiled hearth and wooden mantle, while the dining area features quarry tiled flooring and plenty of room for family gatherings or entertaining.

The kitchen feels very much like the heart of the home. Quarry tiled flooring, bespoke wooden units and open shelving all work perfectly with the character of the property, while the solid fuel Rayburn not only adds atmosphere but also serves three radiators. There is space for a farmhouse table, plumbing for a dishwasher, useful understairs storage and even the original front door bell remains in place. From here doors lead into the scullery and rear hallway.

The rear hallway provides utility space with plumbing for a washing machine along with access out to the rear gardens, the pantry and ground floor bathroom. The pantry itself retains traditional slate and timber shelving, while the bathroom continues the cottage feel with a freestanding bath, electric shower and high-level flush WC with bespoke wooden seat.

One of the standout spaces in the house is undoubtedly the scullery. With its butler sink, coal storage and doors to both front and rear, it already has huge character, but the spiral staircase makes it even more unusual. The staircase rises to an upper storage level with access out to the rear garden before continuing, through a very narrow staircase, up into the clock tower.

The first floor offers four bedrooms arranged off a spacious landing. The two front bedrooms are both doubles and feature ornate fireplaces with decorative surrounds, while the two rear bedrooms overlook the gardens and work well as guest rooms, children's rooms or office space. A further staircase leads up to the attic floor where there is a fifth double bedroom, additional bathroom and useful attic storage room.

Externally:

Outside, the gardens are every bit as impressive as the house itself. Immediately outside the rear door is a slate patio surrounded by colourful cottage planting, winding paths and mature shrubs. Small bridges cross over water features and ponds, linking the various sections of the garden together and giving the whole setting a wonderfully established feel.

One side of the garden features a particularly attractive pond with a Japanese-style bridge beneath a mature weeping willow, while another area leads towards the productive vegetable growing space complete with greenhouse and fruit cage. Orchard areas, woodland paths and tucked-away seating spots all add to the feeling of exploring a secret garden.

The Dutch barn is another hugely useful addition, offering garage or workshop potential alongside two attached workshops, all with power and lighting. Behind this sits a garden store with butler sink and compost toilet, plus a chicken run and coop. Further up through the grounds are additional sheds, a timber garden building, remains of a unique treehouse and even a covered wood store with power and lighting.

Cottage

Across the lane sits the detached former cottage within its own grounds of around 0.23 acres. In need of full renovation but already connected to power, lighting and water, the building feels full of opportunity. The ground floor currently includes two reception rooms, one featuring a substantial inglenook fireplace, together with utility areas and storage rooms. Upstairs are two further rooms accessed via wooden stairs, which could potentially become bedrooms subject to any necessary planning or consents. The rear garden area is equally charming with mature hedging, fruit trees and a useful garden shed.

Agents Notes:

This is very much a property for somebody looking for originality, atmosphere and potential rather than perfection. Modernisation would certainly enhance parts of the home, but there is a real sense that the character here deserves to be preserved. It is the sort of place that feels as though time has slowed down a little, with every room and garden path offering something different to discover.

The rural location places the property within easy reach of Abercych, Cenarth, Cardigan and Newcastle Emlyn, with the wider Cardigan Bay coastline and West Wales countryside both easily accessible for days out, walking and exploring

INFORMATION ABOUT THE AREA:

The nearby villages of Abercych and Lancych offer a lovely rural setting surrounded by the West Wales countryside, with scenic walks, woodland the River Cych and the popular Nags Head pub all close by. Just a short drive away is Cenarth, a popular village well known for its waterfalls on the River Teifi, traditional pubs, café, village shop and thriving local community. The wider area provides easy access to Newcastle Emlyn, Cardigan Bay and the beautiful coastline of West Wales, making it a fantastic location for those looking to enjoy both countryside and coast.
