The hot tub cabin benefits from lighting and three power points, all supplied via its own dedicated consumer unit, which is in turn connected directly to the main fuse board within the bungalow. The hot tub itself is a Canadian Spa Kelowna 4 Person Hot Tub, operating as a convenient "plug and play" model powered via a standard 13-amp plug socket, offering an easy-to-use and practical addition for year-round relaxation and entertaining.

The property further benefits from owned solar panels, helping to significantly reduce day-to-day electricity costs. Any surplus generated electricity is exported back to the grid, with payments received by the vendor which help offset the overall running costs of the property — an increasingly attractive feature for energy-conscious buyers.
