West Harrow (0.1 miles) North Harrow (0.5 miles) Rayners Lane (0.7 miles) West Harrow is located on the western side of the London Borough of Harrow, and roughly halfway between the north and south boundaries of the borough. Prior to the early 20th century West Harrow was overwhelmingly rural. The construction of the Uxbridge extension to the Metropolitan line in 1904, and specifically the new West Harrow tube station, triggered a steady growth of homes in the area, spreading out from the location of the new station.
