GUIDE PRICE: £300,000 - £350,000

Stylish, well-presented home near Pitsea station with London links, solar panels, parking for two, great schools nearby, boarded loft storage, and no onward chain—ready to move straight in.

If homes had personalities, this one would be the effortlessly put-together friend who always arrives early, looks great, and somehow saves money while doing it. Welcome to Elsenham Crescent — a beautifully presented, move-straight-in home that's equal parts practical and charming, with a dash of “why haven't I booked a viewing yet?”

Step inside and you're greeted by a home that's been clearly loved — fresh, tidy, and ready for its next chapter without you lifting a finger (except to make a cup of tea and admire your decision-making skills).

The layout flows comfortably, striking that perfect balance between cosy and functional — ideal whether you're hosting friends, working from home, or binge-watching something questionable on a Sunday evening.

Now let's talk lifestyle perks. Sitting approximately 0.8 miles from Pitsea station, your commute to London Fenchurch Street is refreshingly straightforward — giving you more time to scroll, sip coffee, or mentally prepare for the day ahead.

Families, take note: the property falls within multiple school catchment areas, making the morning school run that bit less chaotic (or at least geographically convenient).

Outside, things get even better. To the rear, you've got two parking spaces — no circling the block, no passive-aggressive neighbour glances. Just park, stroll in, done.

And then there's the smart stuff — solar panels that actually belong to the property, meaning you're not just buying a home, you're buying into lower energy bills and a greener footprint. Future-you is already impressed.

Need storage? The boarded loft has you covered. Seasonal decorations, suitcases, or that gym equipment you'll definitely start using again — there's space for it all.

Finally, the magic words: no onward chain. That means fewer delays, fewer headaches, and a smoother path to getting those keys in your hand.
