This cottage is beautifully presented and versatile, with various rooms suited to different uses.

The front door leads to an entrance hall that's filled with light from a floor-to ceiling window.

Leading off this is a spacious yet cosy sitting room with a woodburning stove, slate hearth and attractive mantelpiece, which means it comes into its own during the cooler months of the year. It has plenty of space for comfortable seating and is an ideal space to unwind.

There's a generous kitchen/breakfast room with a door leading into the rear garden, creating an effortless connection between the interior and outside that comes into its own during the warmer months. The kitchen area is fitted with elegant white units with practical easy-wipe work surfaces, offering plenty of storage and working space, and both its window and glazed back door allow plenty of light to flood into this part of the house. There's room for a large table, making this a great spot for family life and entertaining.

Two further downstairs rooms can be used in a variety of ways, including home-working spaces, dining areas, playrooms or bedrooms, with a ground floor shower room with WC increasing the practicality of downstairs sleeping accommodation.

A spacious main bedroom is located on the first floor and enjoys views towards the River Wye, along with fitted wardrobes and visible ceiling beams.

A bathroom lies close by. Velux windows on the landing ensure this space is always light and airy.
