WELCOME TO CHEVRON COTTAGE

Rooted in its surroundings

Sheltered within the quiet rural folds of Crow, Chevron Cottage offers a life shaped by open skies, green horizons and the gentle rhythm of countryside living. Built in approximately 2005, the property successfully combines the warmth and character of a traditional cottage-style home with the comfort, practicality and lower-maintenance benefits of more recent construction.

Set within grounds of approximately 0.66 acres, this is a home for those who enjoy waking to birdsong, stepping out onto open trails and knowing that Ringwood's vibrant market town is an easy and enjoyable walk away along the Castleman Trailway.

KITCHEN AND DINING

Everyday life in the light

A welcoming entrance porch draws you inside, with doors opening to the kitchen/dining room on one side and the generous living room on the other. The kitchen is an easy-going everyday space, with a peninsula breakfast bar offering storage on both sides, an integrated dishwasher, upright fridge freezer, gas cooker and triple-aspect windows bringing in light throughout the day. A water softener and reverse-osmosis filter are also fitted, adding to the comfort and practicality of the home. From the kitchen, a rear hallway leads through a solid wood door to the garden and also provides access to a cloakroom and further storage.

THE LIVING ROOM

A welcoming place to unwind

The living room mirrors the kitchen’s natural light, with its triple aspect framing the surrounding gardens and countryside beyond. On quieter evenings, the gas wood-burning-style stove creates a welcoming focal point.

UPSTAIRS

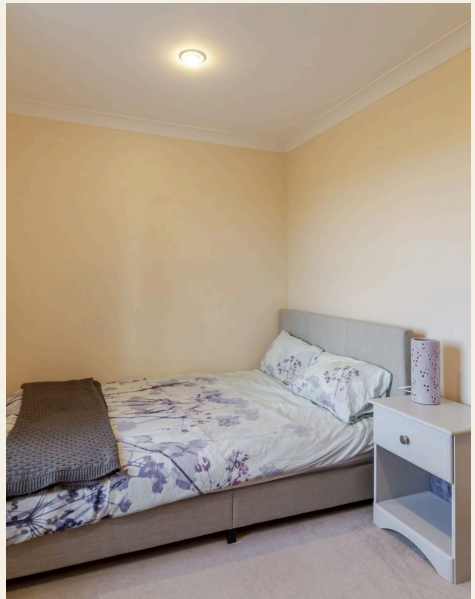

Room to rest and views to enjoy

Rising to the first floor, the landing is unusually bright, with front and rear windows enhancing the sense of openness. Bedroom one sits at the front of the house and is a generous double with far-reaching views towards grazing paddocks and the treeline. A corner vanity unit adds everyday convenience, while a glazed door leads into the en-suite shower room.

Bedroom two is another well-proportioned double with a peaceful rear aspect, while bedroom three, also a double, enjoys views across neighbouring land with glimpses of Hightown Lake in the distance. The landing also features a linen cupboard and access to the loft.

PLOT AND GARDEN

A garden that follows the seasons

Outside, the wraparound gardens unfold across the plot, with a lower terrace ideal for outdoor dining and steps rising to a broad lawn edged by mature shrubs and planting. Beyond this sits an additional landscaped area with numerous fruit trees, wildflower meadows, a pond, vegetable garden and rockeries, reinforcing the sense of space and privacy.

SPACE AROUND YOU

Room to enjoy the outdoors

The single garage and carport sit to one side and benefit from power and lighting, while the wide gravel driveway provides generous off-road parking.

Chevron Cottage offers a relaxed rural lifestyle within approximately 0.66 acres of grounds, with Ringwood around a 30-minute walk away along the Castleman Trailway. It is a home that feels rooted in its surroundings, combining cottage-style charm with the practical advantages of a more recently built property, alongside space, privacy and a lasting connection to the countryside.

THE SETTING

Living in Crow, Ringwood

Crow is a quietly rural hamlet on the edge of Ringwood, valued for its open surroundings, dark skies and sense of separation from the everyday bustle. Life here feels firmly countryside-led, with fields, paddocks and winding lanes shaping the surrounding landscape.

Ringwood town centre sits around a 30-minute walk away via the Castleman Trailway, a popular and scenic route enjoyed by walkers and cyclists alike. The town offers a strong mix of independent shops, cafés and restaurants, alongside Waitrose, Sainsbury's and The Furlong shopping centre. Leisure opportunities include riverside walks along the Avon, health clubs and immediate access to the New Forest National Park for miles of walking, cycling and riding.

Despite its rural feel, Crow remains well connected. The A31 is easily reached, providing direct routes towards Bournemouth, Southampton and the wider south coast. Rail services to London Waterloo are available from nearby stations, including Brockenhurst, making the area appealing to those seeking to balance country living with commuting.

Crow suits buyers looking for space, privacy and a genuinely rural setting without feeling remote. It offers the rare combination of open countryside views, a peaceful atmosphere and a direct, enjoyable route into Ringwood for days when town life calls.
