LOCATION

Step outside the property and walk in any direction and you will discover the revitalising tonic of rural living. Mountain walks are breath taking in every sense and the calm of the Dwyrdd estuary is only moments away. There is a footpath from the village to the foreshore of the estuary and Giftan island, which is only accessible at low tide. This is a heaven for wading birds and other wildlife and is surrounded by the most magnificent views of the Snowdonia Mountains and across the estuary Portmeirion village. In the mountains behind the village is lovely walking countryside with ancient Drovers routes high in the mountains with elevated views of the coastline. from the property is land designated as a "Site of Special Scientific Interest" proving to be a bird watchers paradise and the Welsh coastal path can be picked up nearby. Indeed, the surrounding area is a delight, appealing to those who wish to leave behind the hustle and bustle, whilst being only moments away from nearby Harlech, boasting a cliff top Castle and championship Golf course and the harbour town of Porthmadog.
