Tubney is a quiet, historically layered village whose story stretches from early medieval monastic estates to modern academic research. Its deserted medieval origins, Gothic Revival church, and Oxford linked manor house give it a character far richer than its size suggests. Today, Tubney remains a tranquil rural village set amid the rolling countryside of the Vale of White Horse, approximately 9 miles southwest of Oxford and approximately 3 miles west of Abingdon. Located approximately 1.3 miles from the property is Frilford Heath Golf Course, just outside Abingdon and is a must visit for golf lovers exploring Oxfordshire. Spread over rolling heathland, the club features three championship 18-hole courses.
