Dating back to 1696 and believed to have originated as the village bakers, this GII Listed wonderful character home occupies one of Aynho's most sought-after positions. Constructed of attractive local stone, the property is rich in charm and history, with the delightful quirk of a traditional red British phone box standing beside the front door.

The accommodation is both generous and well presented. An inviting L-shaped entrance hall sets the tone, featuring exposed beams and a tiled floor. The sitting room is particularly impressive, centred around an original inglenook fireplace and enhanced by further exposed timbers.

To the rear, the 18th Century addition houses the open-plan kitchen/dining room, enjoying lovely views over the garden and was stylishly refurbished in 2021, creating a superb everyday living and entertaining space. Adjoining the kitchen is a scullery/utility room, newly refurbished this year.

The first floor offers two bedrooms, one of which benefits from an en suite WC with a stable door opening to views over the rear. Also on this floor is a wonderful family bathroom, completely renewed in 2024 and finished with a beautiful roll-top bath.

On the top floor are two further bedrooms, including a particularly striking principal room with a vaulted ceiling. A shower room, also renewed in 2024, serves this level. The entire central heating system was renewed and relocated to the top floor in 2024.

Outside, the property enjoys a south west-facing walled rear garden, ideal for making the most of the sun. There is also an outbuilding divided into a useful store and a garage, together with off-street parking behind gates to the rear, accessed from the side of the plot.

Aynho, an ever-popular village on the Oxfordshire / Northamptonshire border, enjoys a mix of character housing making this pretty village a favourite for people looking to escape the urban lifestyle. The village enjoys two local pubs; The Cartwright Hotel (currently closed) and The Great Western Arms. The village has an excellent local community, including many groups such as a cricket club, cycling club, toddler group, history society and many more.

The historic Aynhoe Park, a 400 year old estate, is now owned by 'RH England', and allows guests to enjoy a number of high-end eateries, an architectural gallery, tea salon, juice bar and wine lounge. Nearby villages provide a number of nurseries, primary and secondary education options (both state and private), making the area popular with young families.
