LEADGATES

Leadgates is a house of real presence and architectural balance. The handsome stone façade presents a timeless exterior, while internally the property has been transformed to create a light filled and highly sophisticated contemporary interior. The result is a seamless blend of period form and modern design, executed with great attention to detail.

The principal accommodation extends to over 5,600 sq ft and is centred around an impressive entrance hall, where a dramatic staircase and double height space create a strong sense of arrival. This central axis defines the house, linking beautifully proportioned reception rooms and creating an effortless flow throughout.

The main living areas are generous, elegant and filled with natural light. Of particular note is the large open plan kitchen, dining and informal living space, which forms the heart of the house.

This is a superb room for both everyday living and entertaining, with a refined finish, excellent proportions and direct connection to the gardens.

Additional reception rooms include interconnecting sitting and dining rooms, alongside a well appointed billiard room, offering a variety of spaces suited to both entertaining and relaxation.

The leisure facilities are outstanding. The indoor swimming pool complex is exceptional in both scale and design, with a vaulted ceiling, soft natural light and a calm, spa like atmosphere, creating a private and highly usable wellness space.

The bedroom accommodation is arranged across the first floor and is equally impressive. The principal suite is particularly generous, with excellent proportions, several windows and attractive views across the grounds, complemented by an en suite bathroom and a fully fitted dressing room.

Bathrooms are finished to a high standard, with clean contemporary detailing. Two further bedrooms on the first floor provide additional flexibility for family and guests.

An independent annexe offers further accommodation, ideal for guests, staff or multi generational living.

Specification is of a high standard throughout, including underfloor heating across the house and extending into the garage, reflecting the quality and thoroughness of the restoration. There is also a discreetly positioned lift connecting the hall to the first floor landing, close to the principal bedroom.

GARDENS AND GROUNDS

The setting of Leadgates is a defining feature of the property. The approach is both private and impressive, with electric gates leading to a sweeping drive that passes a series of interconnected ponds, with water cascading gently between them, creating a memorable and tranquil arrival.

The grounds extend to approximately 15.81 acres and are immaculately maintained. They include formal lawns, paddocks and mature planting, all set within a wider parkland landscape. A broad stream runs through the grounds, enhancing both the visual appeal and biodiversity, with the surrounding countryside providing a beautiful and unspoilt backdrop.

A substantial purpose built agricultural style building offers excellent storage and houses the biomass boiler, supporting the efficient running and upkeep of the estate. The building also incorporates two office spaces and a separate WC, providing useful ancillary and administrative accommodation. A secondary rear drive provides practical access, while maintaining the privacy of the main approach.

This is a rare opportunity to acquire a period country house that has been so comprehensively and thoughtfully restored, where classical architecture is matched by exceptional contemporary living. Leadgates stands apart not only for the quality of its design, but for the meticulous standard to which it has been maintained, creating a house that is both elegant and entirely turnkey. Combined with its beautifully managed land, complete privacy and excellent proximity to Newcastle and the airport, it represents a particularly special and increasingly uncommon offering.
