Dating back over 200 years, this period home has seen many changes throughout the centuries. Most recently it's been a much-loved family home and the children who grew up here enjoyed a huge amount of freedom and independence, with a healthy outdoor lifestyle. Whether you want to watch the wildlife, grow your own fresh produce, have a horse, or simply live the rural dream, this home can do it all!

History At Its Heart

The property started life as a single-story Norfolk longhouse and at some point the roof was raised and a second storey added. It's been a pair of farm workers' cottages, and still retains the two staircases today. It's also been rented out as holiday homes in the past. Since 1987 it's been a much-loved home to the owner, who raised his family here. A huge success as a family home, it allowed the children to enjoy a sense of freedom and adventure rarely found today and the owner has many happy memories the family's time here over the years. It's a welcoming property with a great friendly feel, plenty of room inside and out and abundant character. It's also incredibly versatile and set up to meet many needs. There's further potential here in the barn, which was rebuilt in the 1980s and has cavity walls, which could be converted, subject to planning.

KEY FEATURES

Throughout The Seasons

Different parts of the house come into their own in different seasons – you can snuggle up in front of the log burner in the sitting room on cosy winter nights or take your morning coffee in the uplifting light of the sunroom in summer. The farmhouse kitchen has a range and is easily big enough for a family dining table, part open to the formal dining room which is currently used as a seating area, with double doors to the sunroom. The flow of these rooms works brilliantly for family life and social occasions alike. There's an additional reception at the other end of the house – perhaps a playroom, den for teens or a study, in addition to a ground floor bathroom and a utility room. Upstairs, the bedrooms are reached via two separate staircases with five bedrooms and a bathroom allowing space for a larger family or for overnight guests. It's a wonderful house at Christmas, the character lending itself to festive decoration, whilst in summer, the house is lighter than you might expect, as many of the rooms are dual aspect with windows to the east and west.

Memories By The Marshes

Outside, there's a workshop, car port and the unconverted barn. The owner's children used to play in here and the occasional piece of Lego still turns up! The barn would be a great games room or could be used for animals, or converted into additional accommodation, subject to planning. You have gardens around the house itself, all set at the end of the long driveway, well back from the road, so it's lovely and peaceful out here. The plot comes with a two-acre paddock and the family have had goats, chickens, sheep and a horse here over the years, so there's plenty of versatility and lots of space to run free, explore and have adventures. You overlook the marshes and you'll see a huge variety of birdlife, including game birds, owls, birds of prey and more, as well as deer. You feel truly away from it all here – you can leave the outside world behind if you want to – but you do have amenities within a short driving distance. There's a pub and farm shop in the neighbouring village, plus the award-winning Waveney River Centre down the road, with a café, pub, shop and more. When you need a bit more, the beautiful riverside town of Beccles is a short drive from here and provides everything from a popular lido and a number of antique shops to supermarkets and the theatre.
