Gayfere Street, London

Tucked away on the charming and wonderfully quiet Gayfere Street, just moments from the heart of Westminster, this beautifully refurbished terraced townhouse presents a rare opportunity to acquire a home of significant character and quality. Arranged over five well-balanced floors and extending to approximately 1,351 sq ft, this three-bedroom freehold residence effortlessly blends period elegance with contemporary comfort.

The home has been thoughtfully renovated over the past decade, with a clear emphasis on style, functionality and preserving its historic charm. The inviting reception room offers the perfect setting for entertaining or relaxing, while the modern kitchen and dining room, leads out to a tranquil and sunny private garden—a rare luxury in central London.

Accommodation is thoughtfully arranged across the upper floors, comprising three generous double bedrooms, each offering excellent natural light and a sense of calm. Two smartly finished bathrooms serve the house, creating an effortless balance of practicality and design with a guest WC adding further convenience. A roof terrace is also accessible through a roof hatch providing exceptional rooftop views towards the Palace of Westminster.

Gayfere Street itself enjoys a rich heritage. Named after Thomas Gayfere, master mason of Westminster Abbey, the street forms part of an historic enclave surrounded by some of London's most iconic landmarks. Smith Square, laid out in the 17th century, has long attracted influential figures in political and public life. The architecture of the area—Georgian, Edwardian and early 20th-century in style—imbues the surroundings with a timeless elegance. Properties on Gayfere Street are exceedingly rare to the market, underscoring the exclusivity of this offering.

Located just a short stroll from Westminster Abbey, the Houses of Parliament, and the open spaces of St James's Park, this home offers the perfect balance between urban convenience and quiet seclusion.
