Location

Barham is a picturesque rural village located about 6 miles south-east of Canterbury in the county of Kent, England. Nestled within the scenic Elham Valley, it is known for its traditional English countryside character, historic architecture, and peaceful village atmosphere. Barham sits along the historic route connecting Canterbury to Folkestone, surrounded by rolling chalk downs and farmland. The village's setting within the Kent Downs Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty gives it a distinctive rural charm and makes it popular for walking, cycling, and countryside living. Although rural, Barham is well connected:

About 15 minutes by car to Canterbury

Access to main rail routes from nearby stations (e.g., Canterbury or Folkestone)

Convenient links to the A2 and M20, facilitating travel to London and the Channel ports
