

Beili Neuadd Wood, Llwyn Lane, Rhayader, Powys, LD6 5NS

Located in the beautiful rolling Radnorshire hills in an intensely beautiful part of rural mid Wales, Beili Neuadd Wood offers a fantastic opportunity to steward your very own wildlife haven. This standalone woodland is fenced, creating a lovely sense of privacy and seclusion. Access is via a council maintained roadway and through a five bar gate which is slightly recessed from the road, and which is flanked by beautiful oaks.

The area is well known for its flora and fauna and the wood has trees of a range of ages, with a mix of mainly broadleaf trees and some coniferous ones too. The trees are fairly well spaced allowing for areas where pitching a tent would be both practical and enjoyable with an outlook over adjoining countryside. The woodland is a short drive from the renowned Elan Valley with its majestic dams and stunning reservoirs and home to an International Dark Sky Park spanning 45,000 acres of protected, low-light countryside.

The popular tourist and market town of Rhayader is less than three minutes drive by car and provides a range of independent shops, pubs, inns and leisure opportunities. The woodland provides prospective purchasers with the rare opportunity to acquire a special amenity plot in glorious surroundings and viewing is highly recommended.

Trees

Beili Neuadd Wood has many oak trees, with some tall specimens relatively evenly spaced along the boundary with the single track tarmacadam road that provides access.

There is a mix of naturally regenerated trees and vegetative undergrowth throughout, The natural regeneration is a mix of rowan, silver birch, hazel, willow, holly, sycamore and horse chestnut amongst others.

Wildlife

Due to its wonderful location around farmland, a range of woodland mammals seek sanctuary here.

As the woodland has been left to itself for a while you can see various animal tracks across the woodland floor.

The presence of woodland animals and small burrowing creature is accompanied by the delightful sounds of the woodland's feathered residents above, featuring the blue tit, pied wagtail, blackcap, robin, sparrow and rook.

In addition to these harmonised songsters, there are daily flights of buzzards and red kites overhead.

Amenity

Throughout the woodland there are open, level spots that would easily accommodate a tent for an overnight stay or a spot of bushcraft if desired.

Picturesque views of the surrounding countryside can be seen from many areas along the woodland boundaries, particularly looking westerly towards the well renowned Elan Valley hills.

Rights of Way

There are no known rights of way across the woodland.
