Once a much-loved village pub, The Sun on High Street in Broughton, Northamptonshire, has been thoughtfully transformed into a unique and characterful family home. Steeped in history and filled with charm, this ex-public house retains nostalgic touches of its past while offering all the comforts and practicality of modern living. For those who appreciate a home with a story, this property is a rare opportunity to own a piece of local heritage. From the moment you step inside, the generous proportions reflect the building's past as a welcoming gathering place. The ground floor provides an abundance of living space, with a large family room perfect for entertaining or creating a cosy retreat. A dining room and a separate living room, both flooded with natural light, offer versatile areas for family occasions or quiet relaxation. The well-designed kitchen and breakfast room combine character with functionality, ensuring the heart of the home is as stylish as it is practical. The ground floor is completed by a utility/WC, maintaining convenience for busy households. Upstairs, four well-proportioned bedrooms provide excellent family accommodation. The main bedroom boasts an ensuite, while the remaining three bedrooms are served by a family bathroom. One of the bedrooms is particularly spacious, making it ideal as a guest room or teenager's retreat. Cleverly placed storage throughout the first floor enhances functionality without compromising style. Adding further appeal, the property retains its old pub cellar a feature that not only nods to its heritage but also offers potential as a wine store or simply a quirky talking point for visitors. Outside, the home offers a private, low-maintenance rear garden, perfect for relaxing or alfresco dining. From here, rear access leads directly to off-road parking for two vehicles, a rare advantage in such a central village location.
