According to Ofcom, Superfast and Ultrafast broadband is available and mobile and data coverage is good outdoors and limited indoors. All mains utility services are connected. Properties built pre-1999 may contain asbestos in certain building materials, including artificial slates. These are generally considered safe if left undisturbed but interested parties must rely on their own survey.

There is easy pedestrian and cycle access to University Parks and the city centre via the cycleway from Ferry Road. There is a general store and public house on Marston Road and a wider range of amenities in Marston, Headington and St Clement's Street in East Oxford.
