"When industrial buildings are thoughtfully converted, they become extraordinary places to live" ~ Kevin McCloud

The Old Pump House is an exceptional architecturally designed home converted from the historic Wall Grange Pumping Station, originally constructed in 1849. Combining striking industrial architecture with beautifully crafted contemporary interiors, this truly unique canal-side residence offers stunning accommodation across four floors together with a detached self-contained annexe, all set within beautifully landscaped grounds in the sought after village of Longsdon.

Denise White Estate Agents Comments

Originally constructed in 1849 and formerly known as Wall Grange Pumping Station, 'The Old Pump House' is a truly remarkable landmark property steeped in local history and beautifully reimaged for modern living. The first pumping station in the area to provide water to Stoke-on-Trent, the site played an important role in the region's industrial heritage before much of the complex was demolished during the 1930s, when a single storey extension was added to the side of the property. The remaining building was subsequently converted from steam to electric power and continued operating until the 1970s, when the station became redundant and was eventually sold.

The current owners acquired the site in 2015 with planning consent already in place to create a residential dwelling and have since undertaken an extraordinary transformation, sympathetically preserving the character and industrial charm of the original structure whilst creating an exceptional architecturally designed home of immense style and quality. Taken back to bare brickwork, the building was comprehensively reconfigured, and two suspended floors were introduced to create impressive accommodation arranged across four levels. The result is a stunning fusion of industrial heritage and contemporary design, where exposed brickwork, steel beams and vast arched windows combine effortlessly with minimalist interiors and warm, homely living spaces. All external walls have been internally insulated with 100mm of breathable woodfibre insulation and lime plaster. Windows and external doors are triple glazed, with Accoya frames.

The accommodation within The Old Pump House is both versatile and incredibly impressive. To the lower ground floor, a large open plan area currently utilised as a home office provides a welcoming introduction to the property and leads through to a sizeable double bedroom featuring an exposed brick statement wall, alongside a beautifully appointed modern family bathroom, utility room and boiler room housing the Austrian wood pellet boiler and MVHR unit. Rising through the heart of the property is a magnificent handmade iron and steel staircase, an outstanding architectural feature in its own right, connecting each floor seamlessly.

From the wide stone front steps, the property opens into an extraordinary open plan living and dining space where imposing triple glazed arched windows flood the interior with natural light whilst perfectly framing views across the gardens beyond. The scale and atmosphere of this room are truly breathtaking, creating a superb entertaining space whilst still retaining a warm and inviting feel. A few short steps lead down into the magnificent living kitchen, thoughtfully fitted with a range of bespoke units with painted solid wood doors, complemented by a wood-fired Esse range cooker and a selection of integrated appliances. The adjoining living and dining area further enhances the sociable nature of the space, creating an exceptional heart to the home perfectly suited to modern family life.

The upper floor continues to impress, showcasing exposed steel beams, vaulted ceilings and electrically operated Velux windows with integrated blinds, allowing light to pour into the space whilst also offering complete privacy and tranquillity when desired. The bedrooms on this floor are served by a stunning contemporary shower room complete with walk-in shower and high-quality fittings throughout.

Externally, The Old Pump House occupies an excellent sized plot in an idyllic position nestled between two arms of the Caldon Canal. The grounds are every bit as impressive as the property itself, comprising expansive lawns together with beautifully planted terraced gardens bursting with colour throughout the spring and summer months. Fruit trees, mature planting and established shrubs create a wonderful sense of privacy and tranquillity, offering an exceptional outdoor environment to enjoy.

Within the grounds stands "The Blacksmiths", a charming self-contained annexe formerly used as the on-site blacksmith's workshop. Lovingly renovated by the current owners, the building now provides a beautiful rustic yet contemporary living space complete with a modern shower room, offering ideal accommodation for guests, home office space or multi-generational living.

The property further benefits from ample off-road parking, an EV charging point and two additional outbuildings positioned to the rear of The Blacksmiths providing useful storage space.

It goes without saying that The Old Pump House represents an exceptionally rare opportunity to acquire a truly unique home of immense architectural merit and historical significance, occupying a delightful canal-side setting within the highly regarded village of Longsdon.

Location

Longsdon is a charming Staffordshire Moorlands village, perfectly positioned on the edge of some of the county's most beautiful countryside whilst remaining conveniently close to the market town of Leek and the wider Potteries conurbation. Surrounded by rolling fields, woodland and scenic walking routes, the village offers an enviable semi-rural lifestyle ideal for those seeking peace and tranquillity without feeling isolated. The nearby Staffordshire Way, Caldon Canal and Deep Hayes Country Park provide excellent opportunities for walking, cycling and outdoor recreation, whilst the Peak District National Park is also within easy reach.

At the heart of the village is a strong sense of community, centred around the historic St Chad's Church and the village hall, both of which host regular local events and activities throughout the year. Longsdon benefits from a selection of everyday amenities including a local pub and convenient transport links along the A53, making it well suited to families, professionals and those looking to enjoy a more relaxed pace of life. The village is particularly popular with buyers who appreciate countryside surroundings combined with excellent access to nearby schools, leisure facilities and commuter routes into Stoke-on-Trent and beyond.
