Set within the settled charm of Newton, this semi-detached home enjoys a position that quietly reflects the best of coastal village living. The sweep of the Gower coastline lies close by, with sandy beaches and clifftop walks shaping everyday life, while the village itself offers a reassuring sense of community. Independent cafés, local shops and well regarded schools sit within easy reach, complemented by green spaces and straightforward access into Mumbles and Swansea for wider amenities and transport links.

The house unfolds with a natural sense of balance and proportion. A welcoming hallway leads through to a comfortable lounge that feels well suited to relaxed evenings, while the adjoining dining room provides a clear focal point for family meals and entertaining. The kitchen sits beyond, practical and connected to the garden, allowing the interior to flow easily outdoors. Upstairs, three bedrooms are arranged around a central landing, each enjoying good natural light, with a well appointed bathroom completing the first floor.

Outside, the plot offers an appealing depth rarely found in homes of this type. A neat lawn to the front creates a gentle buffer from the road, while the rear garden has been designed for both leisure and enjoyment. A paved terrace provides space for outdoor dining before stepping down to a further stretch of lawn. Set within the garden, a detached summer house with power, lighting and its own WC adds a flexible element, equally suited to working from home, creative pursuits or simply a quiet retreat. The overall impression is of a home that feels settled, adaptable and entirely at ease with its surroundings.
