Tucked just off the village square in Sandford, Clovelly Cottage is a particularly characterful Grade II listed, 17th-century thatched cottage with a fascinating history. Originally formed from two smaller cottages, the property has evolved into a much-loved home over many years, retaining an abundance of original features including exposed beams, stonework, inglenook fireplaces and two separate staircases.

The main lounge is a lovely example of the cottage's character, with exposed beams and a stone inglenook housing a multi-fuel stove with a back boiler, which provides heating to the radiators. A second sitting area occupies the lower part of the cottage and has an attractive Victorian-style fireplace.

The modern kitchen has been thoughtfully fitted with light grey shaker-style units, wood-effect worktops, an integrated dishwasher and fridge, ceramic sink, electric hob and double oven.

From here, steps lead up into the former cottage 'Tiny Thatch' which is now part of the main house, where a feature stone fireplace, window seat and door to outside add to the sense of history. This part of the house has its own oak staircase leading upstairs.

The unusual layout continues on the first floor. The 'Tiny Thatch' side provides a self-contained-feeling double room with exposed beams, solid oak flooring and its own small door to the garden. It could make an excellent guest room, home office or potentially offer an opportunity for B&B use, subject to any necessary permissions.

The main staircase leads to the remainder of the first floor, where there are two further double bedrooms and the family bathroom. The principal bedroom has built-in wardrobes and a small inset fireplace, while the second bedroom enjoys views over the garden. The bathroom includes a bath with shower over, vanity sink and a charming stone-faced window.

Outside, the cottage has a multi-level rear garden with established flower borders, a timber-decked sun terrace and another seating area providing plenty of opportunity to enjoy the sun. A side gate gives access to the garden, while a substantial range of useful outbuildings provides excellent storage and includes an outdoor toilet and tap.

The cottage sits on a pretty cobbled street just away from Sandford's village square, giving it a peaceful position while remaining close to the heart of the community.

Clovelly Cottage offers the rare combination of genuine 17th-century character, a versatile and unusual layout and a village setting, while buyers should appreciate that its Grade II listing, thatched roof and single-glazed timber windows come with the maintenance considerations associated with a historic home.

The heating is also a more traditional arrangement, combining the multi-fuel stove and back boiler with electric storage heaters.

For someone looking for a home with history, personality and plenty of scope to make it their own, this is a cottage with a story to tell.
