Feckenham in the 21st century is a beautiful rural community with a traditional English village green with walking and riding routes, including the long-distance public footpath, The Monarch's Way, that passes about 1.5 miles east of the village.

The village and civil parish is in the Borough of Redditch, Worcestershire. It lies some 4 miles south-west of the town of Redditch and some 11 miles east of the city of Worcester. It had a population of 670 in the 2001 census.

In Roman times the village developed from its position on the ancient saltway track between Alcester and Droitwich which later became a Roman road (now the modern B4090 road).

Several bed & breakfast guest houses and two pubs represent the village's hospitality industry. There is a garage carrying out motor maintenance and repairs.

There are two churches in the village. The Anglican church, built in the mid 13th century and has a peal of eight bells and the Roman Catholic church which is dedicated to St. John Fisher and St. Thomas Moore. The village has a family owned pub, a gastro-pub and a community village shop, 'The Village Shop', opened in 2009 and run by the local community.

A range of community activities includes an annual two-day horse show, and a tri-annual Feckenham Flower and Garden Festival that has been held since 1985. There is an annual Summer Fair (called the Wake) and Spring and Autumn Flower Shows which have been held since the mid 1930s.
